

Summer & Fall of 1805

Lewis found Shoshone Indians, persuaded to come to where Clark & the boats were.

When they began their Council Sacajawea recognized her brother (now the Chief of the Shoshones). He furnished horses and a guide to take them through the Lemhi Pass.

They were wet, cold, and hungry, but they came to a branch of the Columbia R.

Oct 1805

Nelson attacked the combined French Spanish fleets off Cape Trafalgar, between Lisbon and Cadiz, Spain; in a totally unorthodox maneuver, he split his ships into two parallel lines and sailed them straight at the enemy, cutting it in half. By late afternoon Napoleon's navy had been vanquished, though Nelson, struck by a musket hall, would burnily expect just hours

after the battle began

Nov 1805

leaving their horses with friendly Indians, Lewis & Clark built canoes for the trip down the Columbia R.

They started off down the Clearwater R. which flowed into the Snake R. which in turn flowed into the Columbia

In Nov 1805 they arrived at the mouth of the Columbia R. & the Pacific Ocean. They built a Fort on South shore of the off western mouth of the Straits of Gibraltar between a Franco-Spanish fleet of 33 ships of the line commanded by Vice Admiral Pierre-Charles de Villeneuve and Admiral Don Federico Bravina and a British squadron of 27 ships under Vice Admiral Horatio Lord Nelson. Part of the British Squadron was under Admiral Cuthbert Collingwood in the "Royal Sovereign". They broke up the enemy's line to representative and use to identifying trees, bringing a cutting section in which 19 drops were obtained (all but 4 of the previous results, and, or rather, a subsequent gate). The British had no ships, but NELSON was killed.

BATTLE OF TRAFALGAR

The good section brought a half the Napoleon's abstract scheme to concentrate on overwhelming that in the chance to save the invasion of Britain. Nelson considered only one of the arguments that stood in his way
